

26 - 27 JUNE 2019 | ExCeL LONDON

The Digital Healthcare Show leads the way for healthcare transformation

It's so tough out there for all health professionals with a particular weight of responsibility falling to those tasked with digital transformation within their organisation.

Sustainable digital progression and integration is becoming front and centre of all strategic plans across healthcare but resource is not often matched with workload, and we at The Digital Healthcare Show know how hard everyone is working.

With EHI Live being closed until further notice, The Digital Healthcare Show team take their responsibility in supporting you even more seriously, it's in this vein that we have already gathered our Advisory Board of expert individuals that include Lawrence Petalidis, Head of Innovation and Impact for CW+, Cleveland Henry, Director of Innovations & Digital Futures, NHS Digital, Philip Scott, Senior Lecturer in Information Systems at the University of Portsmouth, Vice-Chair (Events) for BCS Health & Care, BCS Health & Care and David Shapland, Senior Communications Manager, Paperless 2020 Strategic Communications, NHS England who met on 8th August to start planning for 2019.

Chair of the Advisory Board Lawrence Petalidis said: "I'm delighted to be chairing the board of this leading event for the second year in a row. The show was a tremendous success last year and a reference point for the UK digital health scene. Growth, impact, pragmatism and a holistic, balanced view of this complex space will continue to be key drivers."

For 2019 the British Computer Society (BCS) have become official partners of The Digital Healthcare Show, along with NHS England and NHS Digital. The programme that has already won the event Best Show launch at Exhibition New and Association of Exhibition Organisers has great growth plans for 2019.

We are also in close contact with the police force, retail and banking communities to see how they capture and analyse data safely and counter cyber threats, to spot the transferable ideas that will help you keep your patients safer and alleviate financial pressure your organisation and team are under.

We're continually searching abroad for examples of excellence that can be easily replicated that we can bring to the show and share with you, with new content from Europe, the Middle East and even as far afield as Australia as we keep in close contact with Tim Kelsey whilst he creates different kinds of waves down under.

This Digital Healthcare Show is a direct reflection of the inevitable and imminent change in the healthcare sector to embrace digital technologies – “it was the perfect addition to Health+Care last year” says Lee Davies, Show Manager. “Digital transformation of healthcare is viewed by many as the single most critical factor in addressing the funding, staffing and capacity challenges facing the NHS at almost every level, and in almost every department the event shares case studies delivered by the people who are working at the coalface as well as innovation that can make a difference at scale”.

It’s exciting times ahead but also a lot of work is in front of us all until we get there, but know the Digital Healthcare Show are with you all the way.
